Celebrating 75 Years of our Beautiful Stained Glass Windows!

“I consider myself a stained-glass window. And that is how I live my life. Closing no doors and covering no windows; I am the multi-colored glass with light filtering through me in many different shades. Allowing light to shed and fall into many, many hues.”

“Each stained-glass window tells a part of the gospel story, from God’s holiness to the work of Jesus and the Holy Spirit, culminating in the church’s mission.”

Two meaningful and beautiful quotes about the purpose of stained-glass windows. Each window tells two stories, the biblical story that inspires us to exalt and glorify God and the simple story of the origin of the window itself. Someone, some family, some group in the church gave the window to honor loved ones or to remember loved ones.

Just as colors make our world more beautiful especially with light shining through them, so do stained-glass windows enhance the beauty of God’s house. Like the church family members, each window is a collection of colors, many hues and many shades of the same colors, each church member is a collection of personality traits and gifts to honor God. Each person reflecting God’s light to collectively brighten the community and the world around us.

Sue Allred Gentry, Donna Allred Yarbrough’s sister, whose family was a founding family at Beck’s, relayed this early memory of our church. “One of my earliest remembrances of God was looking up at the stained-glass picture in the front of Beck’s Church, the picture of Christ praying in the Garden of Gethsemane. As a child, someone told me that if you saw a shadow moving behind it, that it was God. I really believed that story and I looked for God’s movement. Seriously, I saw God moving in my church.

Our study and homecoming focus this year has been the biblical history of the beautiful, inspiring stained-glass windows that grace our church as well as the stories behind the origin of each window. It has been an interesting and awesome mission to tell both stories and it is a work in progress. So many windows and so many stories.

It is not too late to turn in information and stories about our church members and the stained-glass windows.

We would love for our final publication to be a real treasured keepsake.
